music reflects subjectivity and identity that idea is now deeply ingrained in both musicology and popular media commentary the study of music across cultures and practices often addresses the enactment of subjectivity in music how music expresses or represents an individual or a group however a sense of selfhood is also formed and continually reformed through musical practices not least performance how does this take place how might the work of practitioners reveal aspects of this process in what sense is subjectivity performed in and through musical practices this book explores these questions in relation to a range of artistic research involving contemporary musical practices drawing on perspectives from performance studies phenomenology embodied cognition and theories of gendered and cultural identity curating under pressure breaks the silence surrounding curatorial self censorship and shows that it is both endemic to the practice and ubiquitous contributors map the diverse forms such self censorship takes and offer creative strategies for negotiating curatorial integrity this is the first book to look at pressures to self censor and the curatorial responses to these pressures from a wide range of international perspectives the book offers examples of the many creative strategies that curators deploy to negotiate pressures to self censor and gives evidence of curators political acumen ethical sagacity and resilience over the long term it also challenges the assumption that self censorship is something to be avoided at all costs and suggests that a decision to self censor may sometimes be politically and ethically imperative curating under pressure serves as a corrective to the assumption that censorship pressures render practitioners impotent it demonstrates that curatorial practice under pressure offers inspiring models of agency ingenuity and empowerment curating under pressure is a highly original and intellectually ambitious volume and as such will be of great interest to students and academics in the areas of museum studies curatorial and gallery studies art history studio art and arts administration the book will also be an essential tool for museum practitioners
